If you're from the Indianapolis area, this next scoop is nothing new. We've been hearing about it for years, but it seems to have a little more validity than usual. Rumors have been flying around about Peyton Manning not being as wholesome as many would perceive. Not only would this affect Manning personally, but would sting the NFL were it would hurt the most... in the pocket book.

Manning has been rumored to be dating Angela Buchman, meteorologist for WISH TV channel 8 in Indianapolis, while continuing to be married to his wife Ashley Manning. The information goes on to say that the Manning family heard about this rumor online and in an effort to throw people off the trail, have invited Ms. Buchman to multiple Manning charity events and public appearances. The rumor continues that Buchman is on the Manning payroll to keep quiet. To add fuel to the fire, Ashley has moved back to Tennessee full time, while Peyton recently informed one of his local endorsers in Indy that Ashley will no longer be making appearances with him at their promotional & charity events.

Doesn't sound so much like a rumor anymore, does it?! The information is too in-depth to just be brushed off. It wouldn't be such a big deal if we weren't; once again, force fed an athlete who is as wholesome as the Brady bunch. Speaking of Brady, did the world forget that he left his pregnant girlfriend, Bridget Moynahan, for Gisele Bunchen! It seems to me like we as fans definitely play favorites and frankly, that's not what LRDP is about.

For those who say this would already be front page news if it were true, I ask you to think about this. If ESPN actually reported the fact that Manning was having an affair, do you think for one second that Manning would honor interviews with them? Wouldn't he just shun them from everything?! The Brett Farve infidelity rumors began with Deadspin, but not because they were the ONLY ones to know. ESPN and other newscasts were able to run the story, because they didn't break it! There would be nothing Farve could hold against these sports outlets, because they were reporting and asking about information another source came up with!

It is not the goal of LRDP to interrupt things in a personal life (see comments on Rex Ryan in Jets article). I DO feel that if we are going to scrutinize Brett Farve, Tiger Woods and plenty of other athletes about their infidelity, Manning is definitely not above being examined. I know many people, mostly Colts fans, will say "no way" or "what's it any of our business".

I have one simple response: Stop letting your children idolize athletes.

Just because someone can putt from 30 yards consistently, sink shots from the 3pt line with no problem or throws 35 touchdowns a season, that doesn't mean that he is a role model. We only know what these athletes let us know and the more we find out, the more we realize, we don't like them so much.

Wives may actually be able to get their husbands to watch that season of The Bachelor: Hall Of Fame Quarterback Edition.
